

Our teacher can bend over and look through their legs!

They need to walk far enough from the tree to find a place where they are just able to see the top of the tree (from their upside-down position). The distance from this place to the base of the tree will be the height of the tree, approximately.

Will Sam's method work? How do you know?

Here's a picture which might help you think about Sam's suggestion.

